I heard that government will transform here. I am worried how long we will survive. [worried]
There was lots of people here before Covid. Business is getting worse now. [sigh]

Mrs. Chan

They are sitting around the table and have dinner.

And then, they start the conversation about the transformation scheme of Chinatown.

The mood gets heavy...

If they tear down this block and Chinese community, where will we go? This is our home!

Those developers don't care about us, they only want to build skycrapers and develop tourism.

My classmates at school say that Chinatown is becoming a tourist area, and even there are fewer authentic Chinese restaurants.

Mr. Chan
Grandma Wong, what do you think of this renovation plan?
Grandma Wong
Well, I've lived here for more than 40 years, and I've seen peaks and valleys.
But this time ... I'm afraid it will never be the same again.
The city government says it is for revitalization and gentrification, but it is a disaster for us small businesses.

But those are not the taste of our Chan's Garden Restaurant ..
No matter what kind of change, our home, culture and identity can't be lost. We have to find a way to hang on.

Government is reforming Chinatown

Mr. Chan

" We can unite and make suggestions to the government to preserve the traditional characteristics of Chinatown."

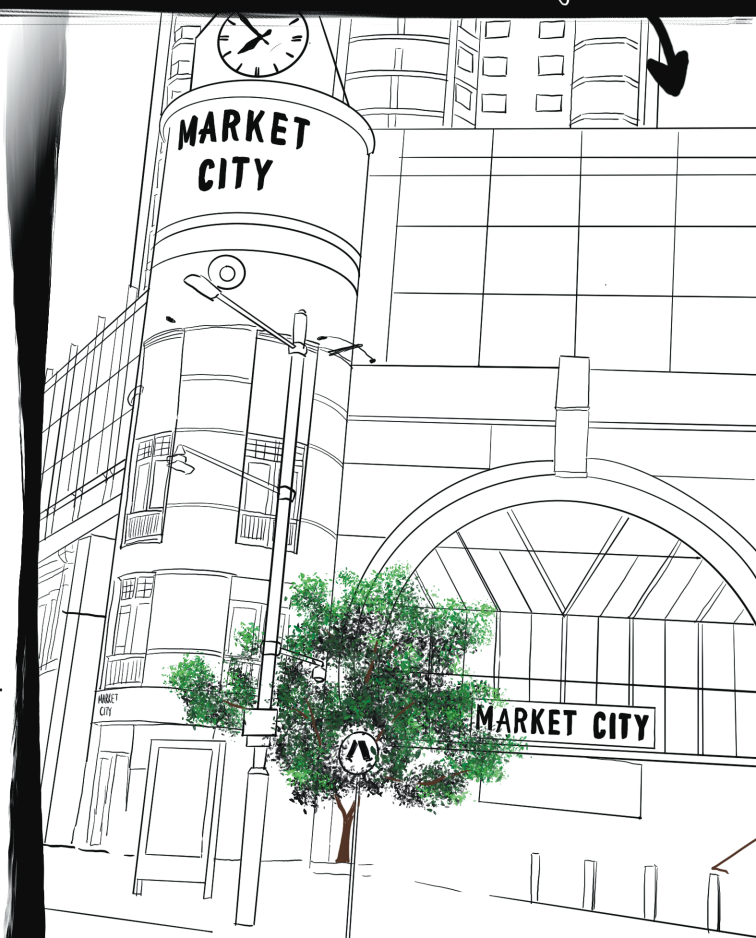

Previous VS. Nowadays

Grandma Wong

" Yes!

We want them to know that this is not just a tourist attraction, but also our home and community. We can't let them to be ruined. "

The family stood in front of their restaurant behind which the street gradually became busier, and the red lanterns were put up again, emitting warm light.

Dad, mom, no matter what the future is like, let's work together as a family. We will always find a way to solve the problems.
Yes. Chinatown is our roots and our hopes.
